

The Lion and the Mouse

by Aesop

Read the story and pick out the key details by answering the questions below.

Once a Lion was awakened by a little Mouse playing on him.

The Lion caught the Mouse and wanted to swallow him. "Please, spare me!" begged the Mouse. "Who knows, I might be able to repay your kindness one day!" The Lion was amused to think that a little Mouse could ever help him. But he let the Mouse off.

Some days later, the Lion was caught in a net spread by a hunter. The Mouse heard the Lion's roaring. He came and gnawed the ropes. The Lion was free.

"Now you see that even a little Mouse can help a Lion," said the Mouse.

Moral: Small acts of kindness are never wasted.

What did the Mouse do to help the Lion? Circle the correct picture.
