

The Ant and the Grasshopper

Read the story below. Then, reflect on the moral of the story. Check one of the ideas below.

One summer day, in a field, a Grasshopper was hopping about, singing and playing music.

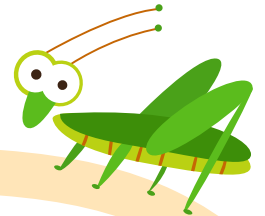

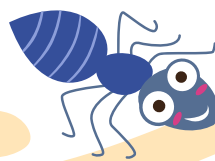

An Ant passed by, carrying some seeds he was taking to his home.

"Why are you working so hard? Come and play with me!" said the Grasshopper.

"I am helping lay up food for the winter," said the Ant.

"Winter is so far away yet!" laughed the grasshopper back.

When winter came, the Grasshopper found himself without home or food. He saw that the Ant had plenty of food to eat and realized how foolish he had been.

You should not waste sunshine working hard.

Work today and you can be ready for tomorrow.

Summers are hot and winters are cold.
