

Robin Hood's Day Off

1. Read the story.

Robin Hood stretched out his long legs in front of the fireplace. "Ahhh," he thought, "A day off!" He listened to the rain pound on his roof.

Suddenly, there was a knock. "Robin! Robin!" a voice yelled.

Robin jumped up and opened the door. There stood his neighbor, a young girl named Gretchen Jones. She lived with her family on a small farm.

"Oh, I am so sorry to bother you! But the two big goats have escaped again. Could you help?" the girl's face was full of hope.

Robin grabbed his cloak and hurried after Gretchen. None of his friends knew that he worked as a farmhand for the Jones family. They were kind people and paid him with eggs and milk. It wasn't as exciting as fleeing from danger, but it kept his stomach full.

2. Check the picture that matches the sentence.

Robin's neighbors have this animal on their farm.

